Late Again

by Heather Jones

The evening had not really gone to plan. Karen glanced at the broad, white face of the clock that sat atop the squat, ornate tower to her left. It was 3am. Oh shit, she thought, I'm so late. She thought about calling ahead, but decided against it. She was feeling too heavy and muzzy headed, unable to deal with the barrage of angry words that would come with the announcement of her lateness. All she wanted to feel was the softness and warmth of bed.

God, she thought, I want to get home. She glanced around her at George Street. The darkened windows of the buildings stared back. How did I get here? She thought, shivering, feeling the damp of the rain that splattered down

Then she heard the swish of tyres on the wet road. Her heart leapt. A taxi! She moved to the edge of the pavement, leaning out into the path of the white cab, waving her hand to attract the driver's attention.

But the taxi sped past. Bastard! Karen spat incensed at the driver's ignorance and stupidity. How could he do that to a girl on her own? She looked down the street for another cab, but the street was empty. Karen felt fear rising in her throat. It was miles home, she thought, miles and miles of empty roads, of darkened alleyways and shadows. "Shit", she muttered to herself as she began to walk, her dulled mind sharpened by adrenaline. "Shit, shit shit."

She moved quickly and quietly along George Street, her senses attuned to any possible danger. She felt like a commando on a mission, a sniper. Kill or be killed, she thought to herself.

She thought about Mark and tears of frustration stung her eyes. She could now see why he got so angry with her for neglecting to let him know when she would be coming home; a simple call that would keep him happy and in the loop. I'm so sorry, she thought. Next time she would call him, next time she would have a plan.

Karen looked around again in growing desperation. Why were there no bloody taxis? She felt so far away from home, so unprotected and dreading the next part of her journey, the turn down darkened Market Street, and the loneliness of Pyrmont Bridge. Where no one can hear you scream, she thought darkly. She prayed for others to be there, normal people, anyone that she could attach herself to, to blend in, to cross the blackened water home.

As she began her walk up to the bridge, Karen's heart leapt with terror. There was a man on the bridge! She couldn't see his face, but she felt panic rising. He was alone. She could see his form, in a hooded top and jeans, facing towards one of the heavy black pillars that held up the monorail. Karen felt her heart pounding. What now? She drew herself up to her full height and walked purposefully on. No fear, she thought, they prey on fear. She had some where to go, some place to be and no-one was going to change that.

As she drew level with him, she felt a spark of recognition, followed by a flood of reassurance. It was Mark! "Mark!" she called out, puzzled, but happy to see him. He didn't turn. Perhaps he's angry with me, Karen thought. She stood next to him. "Mark," she said softly, feeling warm tears of gratitude beginning to roll down her face. "I'm so sorry. Let's go home now, I'm tired." But he didn't look up, continuing to look fixedly at the pillar before him.

Karen followed the line of his gaze towards the pillar. She knew, even before she saw it what would be there. She knew because she had seen it before, last night, the night before that and possibly even the night before that. Her eyes focused on the card that Mark had put there only a few days ago, amongst the floral tributes, the morning after her body had been found. It said simply "Karen, I miss you."

This was a commended winner in the 2005 Magic Casements Flash Fiction Competition.

Eric Brown*The Fall of Tartarus*

In myth Tartarus was the lowest region of hell. So low, it was said, that an anvil dropped from heaven having taken nine days and nights to reach earth would take a further nine days and nights to reach Tartarus. In reality . . . I'd heard many a tale about Tartarus Major, how certain continents were technological backwaters five hundred years behind the times; how the Church governed half the planet with a fist of iron, and yet how, across scattered islands and sequestered lands, a thousand bizarre and heretic cults prospered too. I'd heard how a lone traveller was hardly safe upon the planet's surface, prey to wild animals and cut-throats. Most of all I'd heard that, in two hundred years, Tartarus would be annihilated when its sun exploded in the magnificent stellar suicide of a supernova.' These are the stories of the people who are leaving Tartarus, those have decided to stay and those who are arriving on the planet for the apocalypse. PB $19.95

Robert Carter*The Giants' Dance*

A rich and evocative tale, set in a mythic 15th-century Britain, to rival the work of Bernard Cornwell. In Nether Norton village, life goes on as it has for centuries in the Realm, through the coming and going of the Slavers and the arrival of the Sightless Ones and their Chapter Houses. Will reflects on the two happy years since he and Willow circled the fire together, and the recent birth of their daughter, Bethel. Yet feelings of unease stir inside him. An unnatural storm rages on the horizon. Is his past coming back to haunt him? Four years ago, Will ended a bloody battle by cracking the Doomstone in the vault of the Chapter House at Verlamion. It seemed then that the lust for war in men's hearts had been calmed forever. No longer so certain, Will seeks advice from his mentor Gwydion, a wizard of deep knowledge and power, once called 'Merlyn'. Gwydion suspects his old enemy, the sorcerer Maskull, has escaped from the prison to which he was banished when Will cracked the Doomstone. Is Maskull again working to hasten a devastating war between King Hal and Duke Richard of Ebor, helped by the battlestones that litter the landscape, inciting hatred in all who draw near? Only Will – an incarnation of King Arthur, Gwydion believes – has the skill to break the power of the battlestones. Will last left Nether Norton as a youth of 13. Now a husband and father, he has a lot more to lose. But he has a whole Realm to save. TP $29.95

Bernard Cornwell*The Last Kingdom*

The first book in a brand new series, The Last Kingdom is set in England during the reign of King Alfred. Uhtred is English. Born into the aristocracy of ninth-century Northumbria, at ten he is orphaned, captured and adopted by a Dane. Although taught the Viking ways, his fate is indissolubly bound up with Alfred, King of Wessex, who rules over the only English kingdom to survive the Danish assault. Uhtred grows up against a background of conflict – between the English and the Danes, and Christianity and paganism. Uncertain of his loyalties, a slaughter one winter's dawn propels him to the English side, and he will become a man just as the Danes launch their fiercest attack yet on Alfred's kingdom. Marriage cements his ties to the West Saxon cause, but when his wife and child vanish in the chaos of the Danish invasion, Uhtred must face the greatest of the Viking chieftains. In that battle beside the sea, in the horror of the shield-wall, he discovers his true allegiance. The Last Kingdom, like most of Bernard Cornwell's books, is firmly rooted in history. It is the first novel in a series about Alfred the Great and his descendants. And of their enemies, Viking warriors like Ivar the Boneless and his feared brother, Ubba. Against their lives Bernard Cornwell has woven a story of divided loyalties, reluctant love and desperate heroism. In Uhtred, he has created one of his most interesting and heroic characters, and in The Last Kingdom one of his most powerful and passionate novels. PB $18.95

Michael Cunningham*Specimen Days*

Specimen Days is three linked visionary narratives about the relationship between man and machine. The first narrative, a ghost story set at the height of the Industrial Revolution, tells the story of man-eating machines. An ecstatic boy, barely embodied in the physical world, speaks in the voice of the great visionary poet Walt Whitman. He works at an oppressive factory connected to the making of a mysterious substance with some universal function and on which the world's economy somehow depends. The slight boy can barely operate the massive machine which speaks to him in the voice of his devoured brother. A woman who was to have married the brother is now the object of obsessive interest by the boy. In a city in which all are mastered by the machine, the boy is convinced that the woman must be saved before she too is devoured.

This grisly but ultimately transformative story establishes three main characters who will appear, re-incarnated, in the other two sections of this startling modern novel. The boy, the man and the woman are each in search of some sort of transcendence as is made manifest by the recurrence of the words of Whitman ('It avails not, neither distance nor place...I am with you, and know how it is'). In part two, a noir thriller set in the early years of our current century, the city is at threat from maniacal bombers, while the third and last part plays with the sci-fi genre, taking our characters centuries into the future. The man who was devoured by a machine in part one is now literally a machine – a robot who becomes fully human before our eyes. The woman is a refugee from another part of the universe, a warrior in her native land but a servant on this planet. The boy leaves the earth at the novel's close in search of a new-found land. TP $29.95

Peter David*Tong Lashing(Sir Apropos of Nothing 03)*

The zany adventures of Sir Apropos of Nothing continue as the nobleman finds himself in a magical ancient land where, confronted by monsters and other fantastical enemies, Apropos starts construction on a gigantic wall that appears to go on forever. PB $19.95

Mary Janice Davidson*Undead And Unappreciated(Undead 03)*

The newly crowned queen of the undead, fashion-savvy Betsy Taylor continues her reluctant reign while trying to uncover the truth about some troublesome family secrets, in the sequel to Undead and Unwed and Undead and Unemployed. HC $45.95

Wylene Dunbar*My Life With Corpses*

A young woman known only as Oz is raised by a family of the "walking dead" and finds herself struggling to be free of their stultifying influence in this smart, witty, and ultimately sage coming of age novel set in rural Kansas. By the author of Margaret Cape. TP $28.95

Dayna Dunbar*The Saints and Sinners of Okay County*

Undereducated, broke and jobless, eight-months pregnant with her fourth child, and coping with an unfaithful husband, Aletta Honor is desperate to support her children and sets up a new career as a psychic, using the remarkable talents that she had locked away after the tragedies of the past to rebuild her life. A first novel. Reader's Guide included. TP $28.95

Doranna Durgin, Meredith Fletcher & Vicki Hinze*Smokescreen*

Umberto Eco*The Mysterious Flame*

THE MYSTERIOUS FLAME has two acts. Each act revolves around a stroke. The first stroke, the opening, takes away the protagonist's lived memory. In other words, Yambo has amnesia, cannot remember his name, wife, children or how fast cars move, but he can remember everything he has ever read, the vast library of a voracious reader. The first half of the book takes the form of an investigation: what has Yambo's life been over the last sixty years? After wandering around Milan somewhat helplessly - running into former mistresses whom he doesn't recognize, trying to establish whether he loved or merely admired from afar his beautiful young assistant - Yambo retreats to his childhood summer home, Solara, in the Piemonte mountains. There he takes to the attic, where he goes through boxes of old newspapers, comics, records and albums, effectively trying to build a memory from scratch through the artefacts of his distant childhood. Then he finds the book of a lifetime - the book of a rare-book-dealer's lifetime - a 1642 folio edition of Shakespeare. Then he has another stroke - and all his memory returns, vivid and unconstrained by chronology. But he is in a coma, where he will remain for the second half of the book. In this coma, Yambo is delighted to discover that he can remember at will. His new goal: to remember the face of the girl he has loved for forty-five years, the face that haunted him, that he could never forget. HC $55

David & Leigh Eddings*The Treasured One(Dreamers 02)*

A brilliant fantasy epic set in a world of extraordinary danger and magic from bestselling authors David and Leigh Eddings. They are called the Dreamers. They look like sleeping children. They are, in fact, Gods. Despite the literally earth-shattering climax of The Elder Gods, Dahlain does not regret having brought the Dreamers into the world of the Elder Gods. He only wishes he'd thought through the consequences. His sister, Aracia, fears the whole world will collapse in on itself if the Dreamers should all wake up and realise where they are. It's bad enough them dreaming the future, but at least it's a future. Dahlain is pretty sure he's safe from an 'I-told-you-so' from Aracia. The Dreamers give the Elder Gods a chance in the battle against the vicious Ruler of the Wasteland. Then spies of very short stature start cropping up in Veltan's bucolic and peaceful domain. They look like people - or maybe they all look like the same person - but they are more sinister than that. Fortunately, Dahlain is soon on the scene riding his thunderbolt. This second story of the sibling Gods is the story of the first God, Dahlain, and his child, Yaltar, who is so dangerous when asleep. And it is the story of the Treasured One, a mysterious presence who is controlling Yaltar's dreams! PB $18.95

The Crystal Gorge(Dreamers 03)

The Dreamers are children teetering on the brink of divinity. They have the power to change the world with their dreams. And then they must tell the Elder Gods what they have dreamed or chaos will reign in the Land of the Gods. The Elder Gods have defeated the Vlagh twice - aided by the Dreamers and the mysterious Treasured One, who seems, worryingly, to be controlling them - but as the time approaches for the Younger Gods to take their place, the unspeakable Creature of the Wasteland is on a fast track to world domination. All the varied resources of the domains of the Gods are marshalled to try to halt the spread of evil. But there is pestilence and skirmishing, and suddenly the balance of power shifts. The Ruler of the Wasteland has infiltrated another domain of the Gods, the land of short summers, where bison and deer roam. There the strange and marvellous crystal gorge - surely no natural formation of rock - is destined to become a battleground of great beauty and great terror. The enemy is closer to knowing the secrets of the Treasured One, and the Dreamers are in grave danger of delivering a nightmare to the world of the Elder Gods.

But the more he learns about Jansen, the more he is reminded of the brutal murder, some years earlier, of an Israeli woman at Karnak for which he always suspected the wrong man was convicted. Ignoring the objections of his superiors, Khalifa re-opens the case, but to do so finds he's obliged to team up with bigoted, hard-drinking Israeli detective Arie Ben Roi. Meanwhile, in Jerusalem, Palestinian journalist Layla al-Madani receives an anonymous letter. The writer claims to possess information that could radically alter the balance of power in the Middle East and requests her help in contacting Al-Mulatham, a ruthless terrorist leader whom she recently interviewed. In return she is offered the greatest scoop of her career, which, she is told, is intimately connected with the strange medieval manuscript that accompanied the letter. Against a backdrop of escalating violence, Layla follows up the ancient cryptic document while Khalifa and Ben-Roi uncover the unpleasant truth about Piet Jansen. Their investigations take them from ancient Jerusalem, the Crusades and the Cathar Heresy to Vichy France and the Nazi Holocaust. The Shape of Things to Come

When Dr Philip Raven, an intellectual working for the League of Nations, dies in 1930 he leaves behind a powerful legacy an unpublished 'dream book'. Inspired by visions he has experienced for many years, it appears to be a book written far into the future: a history of humanity from the date of his death up to 2105. The Shape of Things to Come provides this 'history of the future', an account that was in some ways remarkably prescient - predicting climatic disaster and sweeping cultural changes, including a Second World War, the rise of chemical warfare, and political instabilities in the Middle East.

Foretelling an era of war, plague and political chaos, this remains one of the greatest of all works of social prophecy. Part of a brand-new Penguin series of H. G. Wells's works, this edition includes a newly established text, a full biographical essay on Wells, a further reading list and detailed notes. The introduction, by John Clute, explores the political message of the novel and considers the later Wells's growing sense of disillusionment. PB $17.95

Hester ran down the beach, firing her gun at the limpet until its black hull was lost in a boiling of white water. There was nothing to do but shout Wren's name over and over, hoarse, useless, her lonely voice the only sound remaining as the lap and wash of the Autolyucus's wake faded into silence.

Anchorage is no more. The brave ice city that rescued Tom and Hester so long ago is now a static settlement – Anchorage-in-Vineland; a sleepy, hidden secret full of people who've forgotten hard times and children who never knew them. Bored children, like Wren Natsworthy, Tom and Hester's daughter. Wren is fifteen, and thinks she's eager for excitement. When the Lost Boys turn up on the beach, searching for the mysterious Tin Book, Wren's sure that her adventure is here for the taking. But trusting the Lost Boys is a dangerous start to any adventure, and before another day is out, Wren will find herself a captive, and then a slave, and then the bait that leads Tom and Hester back into perilous waters... HC $24.95

Fred Hoyle: A Life In Science

Sir Fred Hoyle was the first astronomer to publicise his subject through the media of radio and television which, in the 1950s, made him a notable public figure. He was also one of the first theoretical astronomers of his time, whose work stirred up major controversies in his own discipline and others. His first outstanding and still undisputed achievement was to show how, first carbon, and then all the heavier elements, were created by thermonuclear reactions inside stars whose explosive ends then scattered them through space - thus making possible life and the other chemical complexities we observe around us. TP $39.95

Daniel Pink

A Whole New Mind

This is a book that you have to read. A Whole New Mind is a groundbreaking look at how we should live our lives in a world turned upside down by rising affluence, the outsourcing of good jobs abroad, and the computerization of our lives a world fast shifting from the Information Age to the Conceptual Age. Lawyers. Accountants. Radiologists. Software engineers. That's what our parents encouraged us to be when we grew up. But Mum and Dad were wrong. The future belongs to a very different kind of person - a person with a very different kind of mind. The era of 'left brain' dominance, and the Information Age that it engendered, are giving way to a new world in which 'right brain' qualities - inventiveness, empathy, meaning - predominate. That's the argument at the centre of this provocative and original book, which uses the two sides of our brains as a metaphor for understanding the contours of our times. In the tradition of Emotional Intelligence and Now, Discover Your Strengths, Daniel Pink offers a fresh look at what it takes to excel in this new world. A Whole New Mind reveals the six essential aptitudes on which professional success and personal fulfilment now depend, and includes a series of hands-on exercises culled from experts around the world to help readers sharpen the necessary abilities. This book will change not only how we see the world but how we experience it as well. TP $29.95
